

Filing a Complaint with NAB

Any citizen who becomes aware of a corrupt practice by a public office holder or government servant may file a complaint with NAB. Complaints can be submitted online through NAB's official complaint portal, in writing by post, or in person at the complaint desk of any Regional Bureau.

A complaint should ideally include the complainant's name and contact details, a clear description of the alleged corrupt practice, and any supporting documents or evidence available. Providing contact details is optional -- NAB does accept anonymous complaints -- but named complaints backed by supporting evidence are generally processed with higher priority since they are easier to verify and follow up on.

Upon receipt, every complaint is first examined by NAB's Complaint Verification Cell, which carries out a preliminary scrutiny of the allegation and available material. Only complaints that pass this verification stage are converted into a formal Complaint Verification and Inquiry, and eventually into an Investigation, if warranted.

NAB does not charge any fee for filing or processing a complaint, and complainants providing credible information in good faith are afforded protection against victimization under NAB's whistleblower protection guidelines.
